Revolutionary ideas, leaders, movements and events – American Revolution 1763 to 1776

Question 1 (20 marks)
Thomas Jefferson, The Declaration of Independence; from Dennis Phillips, Empire of liberty?, Pitman Publishing Pty Ltd, Victoria, 1984, p. 53

When in the Course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature’s God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident\(^1\), that all men are created equal, that they are endowed\(^2\) by their Creator with certain unalienable\(^3\) Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn\(^4\), that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms\(^5\) to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations\(^6\), pursuing invariably the same Object evinces\(^7\) a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world …

\(^{1}\)self-evident – obvious
\(^{2}\)endowed – blessed, given
\(^{3}\)unalienable – cannot be taken away
\(^{4}\)shown – shown
\(^{5}\)forms – ways of being governed

France

Revolutionary ideas, leaders, movements and events – French Revolution 1781 to 4 August 1789

Question 1 (20 marks)

… When everyone had had ample opportunity for examining the respective merits of each possible solution, the Government – failing to end the uncertainty as to whether voting was to take place per head and in a single assembly, or by each order casting a single vote in three separate bodies – decided that the tiers état should have about six hundred deputies out of a total of 1155: in other words, as many as the nobility and clergy together.

Of all possible solutions, this was the most foolish. An equal number of commons’ representatives and voting per head were two inseparable elements of a single solution. The tiers état, having conquered the first position, was forced to attack the second unless it were to accept defeat and ridicule. Had the King himself decreed that all three orders were to vote together he would without doubt have dealt a death-blow to feudal privilege: he would, in fact, have brought about the Revolution. But it would have been a revolution of his own making: one that, endowing1 him with popularity and moral strength, would have enabled him to control the tiers état after giving them the victory. The nobility and clergy, abandoned by the King, and impotent in the face not only of the tiers état but of the State officials, would have had no illusions about the possibility of regaining their position, and would not, through their blind2, obstinate resistance, have provoked the fury and excesses of the revolutionaries. It is true that nothing, by then, could have saved the privileged orders or delayed the triumph of civil equality in France; but the monarchy itself might well have survived the overthrow of feudalism. Instead of which, Necker and the King gave the commons the numerical strength they required over their adversaries, without conceding them the power to use it for a legal victory. It was simply an invitation to help themselves to the rest, and it inevitably urged them forward on the way of revolution.

1endowing – giving him, like a gift
2blind – unthinking

d. Evaluate to what extent this extract provides a complete depiction of the causes of the French Revolution from 1788 up to and including 4 August 1789. In your response, quote parts of the extract and refer to different views of the causes of the French Revolution. 10 marks

Revolutionary ideas, leaders, movements and events – Russian Revolution 1905 to October 1917

Question 1 (20 marks)

The ‘first revolution’ was a formative experience for all those who lived through it. Many of the younger comrades of 1905 were the elders of 1917 …
In the long run the Bolsheviks were the real victors of 1905. They only emerged as a distinct movement afterwards, as Lenin, back in exile in Europe, digested the practical lessons of the failed revolution, and the ideological and tactical divisions between Bolsheviks and Mensheviks became clear. Until 1905 the differences between the Social Democratic factions had been largely personal – Bolshevism having been defined by a personal pledge\(^1\) of loyalty to Lenin, and Menshevism by the rejection of any dominant leader.
In Lenin’s view, three things had been made clear by 1905: the bankruptcy of the ‘bourgeoisie’ and its liberal parties as a political force against the power of autocracy; the immense revolutionary potential of the peasantry; and the capacity of the nationalist movements in the borderlands to undermine the empire fatally.
It was these conclusions that led him to advance the essential Bolshevik idea (a heresy for orthodox Marxists) that a ‘vanguard’ of the working class could seize power and carry out a socialist revolution without first having to go through a ‘bourgeois-democratic revolution’, so long as it formed an alliance with the peasantry and the nationalities to destroy the old regime …
Lenin and Trotsky drew their revolutionary tactics of 1917 from the lessons they had learned from 1905. That is why, in 1920, Lenin would famously describe the 1905 revolution as the ‘dress rehearsal’ without which ‘the revolutions of 1917 … would have been impossible’.
