GENERAL COMMENTS
Generally, students understood and comprehended most of the spoken and written texts in the 2012 Persian examination. However, many incorrect answers were given because the students had misread the associated question. It was apparent that students need further practice analysing and extracting relevant and accurate information from the texts. Students need to use the reading time to read, understand and highlight the required information, paying particular attention to the key words and to the information required from the listening texts.

SPECIFIC INFORMATION
This report provides sample answers or an indication of what the answers may have included. Unless otherwise stated, these are not intended to be exemplary or complete responses.

Section 1 – Listening and responding
Part A – Answer in English
Students were presented with four spoken texts in Persian and were required to extract the relevant information needed to respond to the questions in English. Most students were able to respond appropriately to the tasks. Students performed best in this part of examination.

- six classmates are going to see the movie too
- it is still two weeks until the exams begin
- the main actor and actress (in the film) will talk to the audience
- he will drop her back home (whenever she wants to go home).

Part B – Answer in Persian
In this part of examination students listened to two texts in Persian and were required to respond to a number of questions in Persian. Students were assessed based on their ability to understand general and specific aspects of texts and answer them in accurate and appropriate Persian. Most students attempted both questions in Part B and generally completed the task in the correct language. Some weaknesses in the language were evident, with the most common being inaccurate sentence structure and tenses.

- complains that she is now responsible for everything (housework and children)
- makes the point that the children are not necessarily happier because, although their father is at home more often, he is working and does not have much time to spend with them.

Section 2 – Reading and responding
Part A – Answer in English
This part of the examination was worth 20 marks and contained two written texts in Persian. Students were asked some questions in English and were expected to answer in English. Many students attempted all questions and understood the texts well. Some students did not read the questions carefully and did not spend sufficient time analysing the questions, which led to misinterpretation and irrelevant responses.

Text 7
Question 7a.
Stories and myths
- connect the imaginary world of children to the world of adults
2012
Assessment Report

Part B – Answer in Persian

Text 9
Question 9
Students were asked to write a persuasive letter of 150–200 words in Persian. Students needed to include some of the information, ideas and/or opinions given in the text when writing a letter to the Department of Environment, explaining why it is important to save Lake Orumieh.

Section 3 – Writing in Persian
In this section, students were asked to answer one of four questions and write their answers in 200–250 words in Persian. Overall, students’ performance was good. Some students who answered Question 10 showed a high level of creativity in their writing. However, recurrent weaknesses included spelling, inappropriate vocabulary, grammatical errors and a lack of variety in sentence structure. Teachers should ensure that students know the differences between persuasive, informative, evaluative and personal kinds of writing.

Question 10
For Question 10 students had to write an imaginative short story for a competition at their Persian school beginning with, ‘When I opened the door at home, there was a big box with my name on it on the doorstep …’ This was the most popular question in Section 3.

Question 11
This was an evaluative task that required students to write a report for a community newspaper about an art exhibition from the Middle East that they had attended.

Question 12
Students had to write a personal diary entry about an experience that had a significant positive impact on their lives.

Question 13
This question asked students to write an informative article for their Persian school’s newsletter about the advantages of growing organic vegetables and fruits at home.
